PROPRIETORS.

THE MANAGERS

Of the Philadelphia Chesnut Street Amphitheatre, in offering their unparalleled List of Attractions for the patronage of the public, beg leave to assure them that the strictest scrutiny is paid to the character and selection of the Amusements they present, with their extensive and beautiful Stud of Horses, and a very numerous Company of highly popular Equestrian Artists, including such a combination of talent as has never on a former occasion been presented to an American audience. The entertainments which they will bring forward, are marked by Variety, Novelty and Splendor, and they doubt not but their exertions to cater for the public, will insure to them patronage and support equal to the immense outlay they have been at for the purpose of producing every thing with the strictest observance to perfection.

Splendid Stud of Horses.

This department of the establishment has never been approached by any similar exhibition in the World, as regards number, symmetry of form, beauty of appearance, fleet travelling and astonishing performance. The very flattering notices that were bestowed upon this splendid Stud of Horses by all who have witnessed their movements, as well as the high encomiums lavished upon them by the leading papers of Philadelphia, will of themselves sustain the managers in the assertion here made.

The Band of Music is comprised of Artists of the highest order of Musical attainments, having been selected with a view to the character and reputation of the Musical World, rather than to the expense attendant thereon. The Airs to be performed are of the latest and most popular description, in the execution of which this paragon of an Orchestra is beyond comparison.

Will be exhibited at Centreville, on Thursday, the 23d, at Stroudsburg, on Friday, the 24th, at Bushkill, on Saturday, the 25th, and at Milford, on Monday the 27th of April.

Admission to Boxes 50 cents, Children under 12 years of Age to Boxes, half price.—Put 25 cents, without distinction to age. To obviate all difficulty the Managers wish it expressly understood that there is no half-price tickets admitted to the Pit.—For particulars of each day's performance see Large Bills posted at the Hotels, and Small Bills daily.

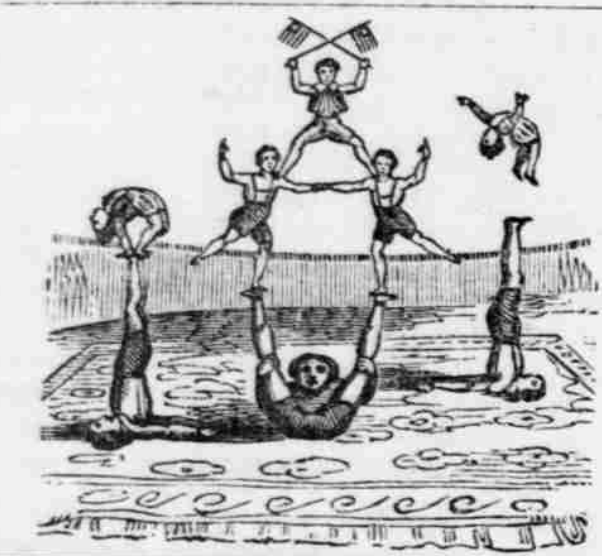

Doors open at 12 1-2 o'clock, performance to commence precisely at 1 o'clock, P. M.

The Company of Equestrians is composed of Artists of the greatest celebrity in the World, having been judiciously chosen from the first Amphitheatres of Europe and America, and calculated to perform the greatest variety of entertainments ever offered to a discerning public. In the chasteness, daring, and intrepid performances that will be offered, the gentlemen composing the company attached to this establishment, are particularly celebrated. Their exertions have ever met with the highest eulogiums from all sorts of people, and the Proprietors assure the public that every exertion will be made to render this department beyond the possibility of equality with any other exhibition in the known world, for the confirmation of which they refer to the many flattering notices they have received from the independent press in every section of the country.

In order to give a character to their exhibition equal to its standing for Talent, the Proprietors have determined that no females shall in the smallest degree be connected with the performances or travelling of the Exhibition, but that the reputation of their Amphitheatre shall be advanced beyond the slightest possible shadow of obloquy, by the probity and upright conduct of the Performers in private, and chaste, talented and astonishing performances in public. This they regard as a very essential and highly important part of the exhibition, as the introduction of Females into an Equestrian Establishment is not calculated to advance the interests, while they not unfrequently mar the harmony of the entertainments and bring the whole exhibition into disrepute. It never was ordained by Nature that woman should degrade the reputation of her sex by a display of Gymnastic Feats, which are not calculated for any other than the stalwart man.

The spacious pavilion in which the numerous performances will be exhibited, and all the Phalanx connected with the Circus are entirely new. The Amphitheatre is constructed on an entirely novel and vastly improved plan, of the largest and strongest description. The seats are so arranged as to make a few hours spent in witnessing the performances a pleasure instead of pain, as has heretofore too frequently been the case. The interior is beautifully arranged, and every possible regard observed in its construction to insure strength, durability and comfort, so that no apprehension need be entertained on the score of convenience and safety.

The Performances

Will comprise the most unexceptional and interesting entertainment of every class of Nations and Legions, calculated to instruct the minds of all who may honor the exhibition with their presence. The Principal Feats will consist of the most unparalleled Scenes in the Circle, and Acrobat Evolutions of Manly Agility, embracing Stiff Vaulting, in which the Artists of this company defy competition: Gymnastics, Pyramidal Devices and Chinese Pagodas, in full and appropriate Costume; splendid chivalric Pageants, interspersed with a choice variety of Comic and Dramatic Entertainments; extraordinary and wonderful Horsemanship, by the unequalled Riders, who will perform many entirely new Scenic Acts, together with the magnificent display, richly equipped in costly trappings, of the beautiful and extensive Stud of Horses, and well trained

Group of Burmese Ponies,

Which will be introduced in the Epsom Pony Races, and a Grand Entree, entitled Elfin Steeds and Fairy Riders, the Ponies being rode by the children connected with the Exhibition. The whole constituting one of the most astonishing, animated and interesting spectacles of Equestrian Entertainment ever offered to an enlightened and liberal public.

A CARD TO THE PUBLIC.—The very flattering encouragement lavished upon this exhibition during its stay in Philadelphia, is unparalleled in the annals of Equestrianism of that moral and intelligent city. Not only was the Amphitheatre attended by over 170,000 persons during a season of five months, but the audiences were composed of a greater display of the beauty, fashion, and moral portion of that city, than had ever before honored the interior of a building of this nature. To their unprecedented success in Philadelphia, the Managers are indebted to the gentlemanly and judicious conduct of their performers in private life, and the unceasing exertions of all connected with the exhibition to render it a source of gratification, amusement, and instruction to all. The entertainments were arranged on an entirely new and novel scale, with a close view to their correctness, and a strict observance to chastity, morality and virtue. Could the managers present the public with a title of the flattering praises of the Philadelphia Press, they would at once acknowledge the truth of these assertions, for a more liberal countenance was never given to an exhibition of any nature, than was freely lavished upon this. The same impulse which stimulated the Managers to action and which produced such happy results in Philadelphia, will be characterized in all their exertions, and the same regard to direct deportment and undeviating conduct, will be their study to achieve and their wish to execute what they have not the slightest doubt will receive the sanction of all classes of society, moral, religious, intelligent, and refined.
